Conclusion

Everyone has their problems—those that try to solve them are the leaders. They realize that they can't always cope alone and aren't afraid to talk with friends, counselors and teachers.

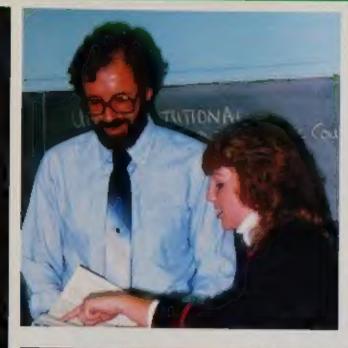

Learning to think and act according to our individual philosophies is an example of leadership. It is important that we think our own thoughts without worrying about being different. If "everyone does it," does that make it right?

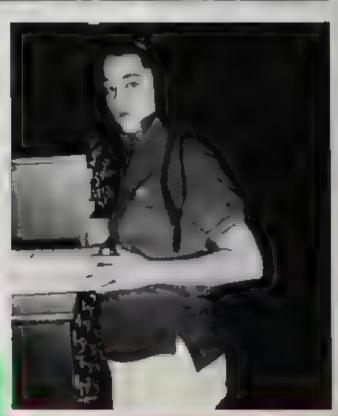

study shows the student's determination to learn. By doing this, they are improving themselves and the world around them through knowledge.

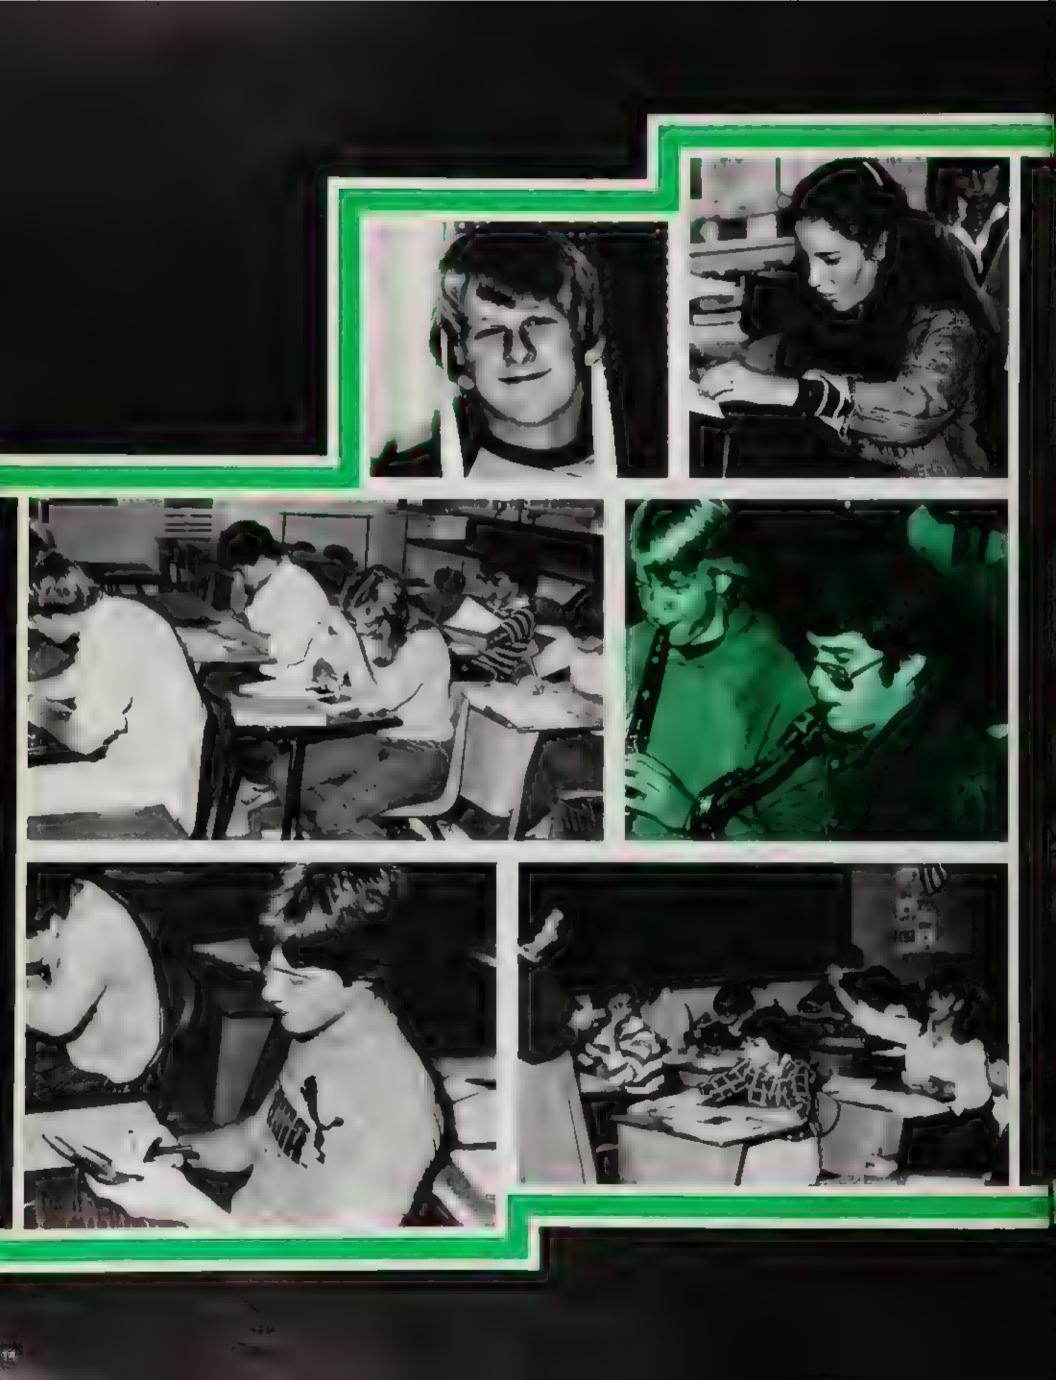

There are enough things in this world which are depressing. Those who provide us with entertainment through jake telling handling or other individual telents, are making society a better place in which to live

We must have an open mind when discussing ideas with others. Even if we believe we are one hundred percent correct in our reasoning, it is still worth the time and effort to listen to what others have to say. Then we must explain to them why they are wrong or our knowledge is worthless.

Students are also leaders outside of school. Besides their regular school activities, many take on outside jobs. Though some feel over-burdened with added tasks, these students handle both school and work related activities.

Lenders also unify a school | by | attending functions | and | participating in school activities. They go all out to support their school | and | their friends, | and | others follow their example.

Patricia Shappell

Mrs Shappell has avoided a trap that many advisors might fall into. She doesn't inflict her opinions on anyone. — David Scannell

She's really interested in students' ideas. — J. Bigelow

Whenever I think of cute Mrs. Shappell, all I can do is smile - Kris Havelas

Mrs. Shappell always volunteers her suggestions and insights. She values students' opinions and respects students' abilities to make decisions. She is nothing short of super. — Russ Muirhead

She has a remarkable capacity to understand. — Aime

Pooh wanted to be a knight, so Christopher Robin took a stick and touched his shoulder and said, "Rise, Sir Pooh de Bear" Pooh rose and said, "Thank-you" — Pamela Moreau

"Nor knowest thou what argument thy life to thy neighbor's creed has lent. All are needed by each one; nothing is fair or good alone."

- Emerson

As the students shuffle out of her room she calls after them, "Keep Smiling" Patricia Shappell seems to follow this philosophy — she is a woman of spirit and compassion. Her students consider her a little flighty, and perhaps she does have just a bit of Don Quixote in her; that comical quality which makes her different.

She is a dedicated English teacher, stating once, "I love words" She requests input from her students, resulting in two-way learning. She is assertive, yet personable. — Her character almost compels her students to want to learn

As an advisor to the Class of 1984, she "rules" with ultimate fairness, acting more as a guide than an autorative leader. She is open and supportive of ideas; creative and spontaneous in her own right. Mrs. Shappell is our base from which we experiment, allowing us to err, if we may, or achieve success

Yet Patricia Shappell goes beyond the limits of a teacher or an advisor. Some think of her as a mother figure, treating her "children" with Dunkin Munchkins on exam days. She never hesitates to offer advice or lend a sympathetic ear. She unselfishly divides her time among students, prom committee meetings and trips to the bank; creating a certain equilibrium

We, the class of 1984, dedicate the Aglaia to Patricia Shappell who seems to emulate Katherine Hepburn's philosophy by "never losing sight of the fact that just being is fun."

Teachers

TRIBUTE

Ask most Central students what their most challenging course at Central is and Mr. Covatis' Biology class always enters into the conversation. Most will quickly add that it was worth the effort for the amount of knowledge gained from the experience was "phenomenal."

classroom. He has served on a number of school related committees and his attendance at numerous school events has helped to make education and school life better for all students. He has been seen running on the basketball court as well as the stage. Although the biology he taught the M.A.S.H. unit left the students wondering... A CAT SCAN...?

Contrary to the stern outward appearance which he portrays while teaching, Mr. Covatis possesses an amiable sense of humor as well as a sincere interest in his students, both of which make him an even more interesting teacher and even better person.

For these reasons the Aglaia staff has chosen Mr. Covatis as the recipient of this year's tribute. Thank you, Mr. Covatis for teaching classes which not only induce students to think, but also create an aura of fascination.

It was to be a great year for coach Jim. Stevenson's boys' warsity soccer team, entering the regular season with an 8-2 pre-season record. The first two games exemplified the potential of the squad as they won both games with shutouts.

Unfortunately, from that point something became lost, it was not their teamwork, their intensity, or their determination, for these traits were displayed continuously. Of the seven losses suffered by the Little Green, five were by a solitary goal.

However, the team did play well when they had to, defeating four state tournament bound teams before losing to the defending state champions. Pinkerton, in double overtime.

Leading the squad to more than double the wins of the previous year were senior co-captains Chris Laberge and Roger Boisse.

Sporting an impressive 11-7 regular season record, the boys' versity basketball squad did Central proud. Second year head coach Jay DuFour led his team with a certain style and finesse...

The Little Greek was a top contender throughout the season and into the tournament with victories ever such respected teams as Nashus and Dover. The boys were at their best in December as they hosted the annual Christmas Tournament. Though the hoopsters failed to capture the first place trophy, they did play in the final match against a Cambridge team, termed "Massachusetts best."

The Little Green did, however, manage to remain undefeated in the Queen City, thus garnering the City Crown once again. Victories such as this kept the Varsity '5' well-respected. Senior standout David Stideny was chosen by his teammates to captain the Little Green in its 1932-1984. Corneraism. David's consistently.

1983-1984 campaign. David's consistently outstanding play on the court proved him wor-thy of this title. The duties of co-captain were shared by the remaining seniors.

Senior pride played a large role in this team's success as guards Peter Evans, Richard Girard, and Mickey Gomes teamed up with forwards Brendan Perry, Mickey Spain, and Stianny to provide a solid starting lineup.

Their undying effort, enthusiasm, and dedication can best be characterized by their performance on the court and those two little. words that mean so much, "Central Pride.

The Central Girl's Winter Track Team had an outstanding season this year. At the start of the 1983-1984 season the team was faced with an enormous task of carrying their undefeated streak through another season

The team, led by coach Joe O'Neal, accomplished this task, defeating every opponent by at least 40 points. The team's depth and unity were shown to the state as they received the title of "Team of the Year' for the second consecutive year.

This group of athletes could not be stopped after winning this award, however the 1983-1984 team wanted to retain the state title which they had garnered the previous year.

On February 3, 1983 the team traveled to the Paul Sweet oval at U.N H. with feelings of uneasiness in their stomachs. With the tremendous efforts of Kris Havelas, Kris Stone, Heather Makere, Mary Ellen Deroschers, Wendy Smith, Nancy Boulanger, and the all out support of the entire team, the girls managed to keep the State Championship honors at Central, where they belong
